At a Glance

Founded in 1971, National University is the second-largest private, nonprofit institution of higher education in California and the 12th largest in the nation. Accredited by WASC, National University makes lifelong learning opportunities accessible, challenging, and relevant to a diverse population of nontraditional students. The University's evening-focused, accelerated format means you can earn your associate's, bachelor's, or master's degree while continuing to meet your personal or professional obligations. Our one-course-per-month format allows you to finish your degree more quickly than you would at a traditional university.

National University makes attending classes convenient while maintaining high quality degree offerings. Our curriculum combines concept, theory, and application so that what you learn in the classroom is relevant to the workplace.

The University offers something for everyone, including more than 100 associate's, bachelor's, and master's degrees, 21 teacher credentials, and numerous professional and personal enrichment certificates. You can pursue your interests in a wide variety of fields of study offered through the University's five schools and one college:

School of Business and Management

School of Education

School of Engineering and Technology

School of Health and Human Services

School of Media and Communication

College of Letters and Sciences

Because National has 26 campuses throughout California and one in Nevada, there's probably a location near your work or home. You may also find program information, speak with a counselor to create an education plan to meet your goals, and learn about financial aid options at National University Online Information Centers located in Bonita, Palm Desert, Sacramento, Santa Ana, Temecula, and West Covina, California; Summerlin, Nevada; Orlando Florida; and Lima, Peru. And since National offers more than 60 degrees and credentials online, your education can go wherever you do.

YOU CAN PURSUE YOUR INTERESTS IN A WIDE VARIETY OF FIELDS OF STUDY.

SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING AND TECHNOLOGY

As organizations continue to adopt increasingly sophisticated technologies, those with technical expertise have many career options available to them. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, information technology managers, computer scientists, database administrators, systems analysts, and software engineers are expected to be among the pace setters for job growth through at least 2016.

Hands-on learning using state-of-the-art tools and online training simulations are critical to technology and engineering students, so the School incorporates these facets into its diverse programs. At National University, you'll be exposed to new software applications as well as current technologies.

SCHOOL OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Opportunities have never been better for starting a career in healthcare. The U.S. Department of Labor reports that about 3 million jobs will be created in health services between 2006 and 2016—more than in any other industry. The high level of growth has created a shortage of qualified nurses and other healthcare professionals to meet the needs of a diverse population. National University's School of Health and Human Services was created to meet the growing need for trained healthcare professionals in California and throughout the country.

National University provides the training and degree programs to prepare students for careers in rewarding fields, including nursing, healthcare administration, public health, and hands-on allied health. Earning your degree from the School of Health and Human Services will help you advance your career in the dynamic healthcare industry. You will develop critical thinking and therapeutic skills and, in some cases, be prepared to take individual, state, and national licensure and certificate examinations.

SCHOOL OF MEDIA AND COMMUNICATION

Committed, artistic, visionary—these are a few of the words used to describe people drawn to careers in interactive arts, digital journalism, strategic communications, digital cinema, and screenwriting. Motivations may vary, but passion for the craft is the unifying factor that binds those in the creative, media, and communications community.

You are a modern-day storyteller. Whether you choose to tell stories traditionally through print or through more contemporary media like digital cinema, National University's School of Media and Communication can help you reach your goals. Based in San Diego, with a large presence in Los Angeles and San Jose, the School offers convenient access to professional instruction and hands-on learning. You'll use the latest technologies that mirror today's workplace, giving you hands-on experience. Each program also focuses on team building, collaboration, and project management skills to further equip you for the work setting.

COLLEGE OF LETTERS AND SCIENCES

National University's College of Letters and Sciences provides students with programs that are both professionally valuable and academically challenging. You can choose from degree programs in liberal arts fields—such as arts and humanities, social sciences, and professional studies—and the sciences, such as natural science, mathematics, and criminal justice.

Liberal arts programs prepare students to enter and move ahead in many different careers by developing a student's analytical, critical thinking, and writing proficiencies. Skills highly sought after by employers—communication, creativity, analytical thinking, diplomacy, problem solving, leadership, team building, and appreciation of cultural diversity—are covered in the variety of degree programs offered by the College.

Students who study lab-intensive science programs take the first step to a lifelong career in discovery. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, careers for biologists, researchers, conservation scientists, and foresters continue to grow for all occupations through 2016. These programs put students on the path to becoming life science and earth science teachers as well. National University's bachelor-level science programs also prepare students to enter specialized graduate programs.
